Hongkong, January 23rd, 1880.

ANOTHER surprise has been sprung upon us by Mr. HENNESSY. The announcement that the seat at the Legislative Council rendered Facant by the departure of Mr. Hvon Bold GIBB has been filled by the appointment of Mr. No Choy, cannot fail to be received not only with astonishment but also dissatisfaction. We do not wish to impugn-Mr. No Cnox's qualifications for the seat, provided it were desirable to give it to a Chinaman, though even then it may be doubted whether a native merchant of high standing | 8th ultime. would not have been a better representative of the views and requirements of his countrymen. If, however, it were thought necessary that a Chinaman should have a sent at the Council as the representative of the native acting Crown Solicitor during the absence of Mr. community, the straightforward course would have been to have created another seat for that purpose, instead of diminishing the already small influence possessed by the sent to Edinburgh Castle." British residents of Hongkong in the Go vernment of the Colony. In the charter it is provided that "in addition to the said Governor, the said Legislative Council shall be composed of such public officers within the said Colony, or of such other pe within the same, as shall from time to time us, all of which councillors shall and Flintshire. Sailing vessels, William Ritson the 7th instant. hold their places in the said Council at our and Nester, pleasure." From this it will be seen that the Council may be composed entirely of officials, or of such persons as the Crown (by the Governor), may be pleased to appoint It was clearly intended, however, that there 'should be a number of unofficial members of the Council, and it is not unreasonable to assume it was int aded those councillors should be Englishmen. Long custom may be almost said to have given the force of law to this position, although Governors have not infrequently trenched so far on the assumptive rights of the colonists, to serve their own ends, as to appoint officials as unofficial members of Couneil, thus obtaining complete control of votes which it was intended should be perfectly in rister at Law of the Honourable Society of Lin dependent. The convenience of this arrange. ment to the Government is obvious. In these remarks we do not wish to be understood as objecting to the presence in the Council of the official who at present sits as an unofficial member. We think it highly desirable the Council, but it should be in virtue of his office; his position at present is a nomalous; But though Governors have availed themselves to some extent of this ingenious means of obtaining control of votes assumed to be independent, we believe we are correct in saving there have never been ! less than three independent members on the Council to represent the vast commercial. been Englishmen, as it was intended they should be. To appoint others is an breach,

To meet this difficulty, therefore, the Crown has reserved the whole of the legislative power in its own hards; but recognising the right of British subjects to be heard in legislation affecting them, gives a certain number of seats on the Council to independent members; Hongkong is a British Colony: If Chinamen choose to take up their residence within our borders we extend to them the protection of tion we reserve to ourselves. It may be suidthat Mr. No Choy, like some others of his countrymen, is a British subject, and is therefore as much eligible to be called to the Couneil as any other British subject. This is have no besitation in saying that if Chinaman who are British subjects are eligible to be apinexpedient so to appoint them, more especially nuturalisation becomes an Englishman or an Frenchman, they do so because their synipathies are with the country of their adoption, that their families shall be amalcamated with that nation. Schools, but I am quite willing to approve as This step was made almost necessary on my part of the code, a general regulation on this part, because at end of last year, the school subject applicable to schools receiving grants. Intherto carried on at St. Paul's College, the in-aid and framed so as fairly to meet all cases, only school for Protestant boys in the Colony, pproval before it is brought into operation the For the sake of English boys, whose parent drafts of such a regulation, which, if approved, are, for the most part, members of my congre will eventually become port of the grant-in-aid gation. I felt bound to provide some means whereby they might receive an education based on Church of England principles. In taking this step I have received the cordial support of those for whom I made the provision. The number of English boys in the Colony is only limited; but I have now the names of 25 boys on the school list, and 19 are in attendance this morning. To show that the parents desire the kind of teaching for their children which I in tend to give here, I may say that I was yesterday informed by the Acting Inspector of Schools that every English boy had left the Central chool (where secular instruction only is given to join my classes. From an experience of the Colony: dating from 1871. I am convinced that English perpets here desire the establishment of a school (1) where religion has its place, and (2) where their boys can receive instruction apart from the Chinese. I am surry to say that I am unable to put my school nader Government Inspection, and thus claim the pecuniary support (under the Grants in-Aid Scheme) which I really very much need I cannot conscientiously give secular instruction only for the required number of hours per day nor can I omit the Bible and the Prayer Book from my time table

I have determined to charge each boy a fee o but is quite unsuited to the peculiar character of $2, but, of course, the sum total arising from such a charge will be quite inadequate to defray the expenses of the school. The school feet will probably amount to about $45 per mensem, but even under the present favourable circumstances. when I am giving my personal superintendence to the school, and helping considerably in the class work. I have been obliged to involve myself in a charge for musters of $88 per measure. I calculate that the school will cost quite £300 per annum. I ought to say that the outlay, in commenting this school, for books, desks, forms, &c., has been great falling but little short of $250. Of course, this account would be considerably increased but for the fact that I give three I asked in Chinese what the matter was, and he munition had reached Barkab. Many boxes of letters are received at the Post Office not sealed, that is to say, the box . fastoned with sealing wax, but there is no impression of a seal. The attention of bexholders is called to the necessity of carefully scaling such boxes with some recognisable seal, and of sending a chitbook or receipt with them. The omission of the latter precaution leaves a doubt as to whether the contents of the box ever reached the Post Office; the emission of the former, as to whether part of them might not have been abstracted for the sake of the Postage Stamps.

EXTRACTS. MISSING-Minsing, no more: a dumb, dead wall Of silence and darkness stands Between us and they who left us here, In the golden morning of the year, With hope and promise and parting cheer, Wet eyes and waving hands. Never an omen told our bearts How fate lurked, grim and dark;

Fresh and awest smiled the April day, And the trencherous waves in hanlight lay, Kissing the sands of the sheltered bay, And laughing around the bark.

Like molten silver shore her sails, --As she glided from our gaze; And we turned us back to our homes again, To let quatom grow o'er the yearning pain, And to count by the hearth, ah, labour vain The lonely lingering days.

Never a letter from leving hands, Nover a messare came: We know long since should the port be won; We know what the fierce north gales had done And slowly crept over every one A terror he would not name.

Ah me! those weary mornings, When out on the great pier-head We strained our sight o'er the tossing seas, And sindled each change in the fitful breeze And stroye to answer, in tones of case, Light question coldly said.

Alf met those weary midnights, Hearing the breakers rour; Starting from dreams of storm and death, With beating pulses and catching breath, To hear the white surf " call " beneath, Along the hollow shore

Never a final down the wires, Never a word from the East. From the port she sailed for-how long ago; Why, even a spar one would weep to know, Tosagd on the wild waves' ebb and flow. Were somothing real at least. Missing, missing, and silence; The great tides rise and fall; The sea lies compling out in the light, · Or dances, all living, gleaming white; Day follows day, night rolls on night;

Missing, and that is all. . The tark crossed out in the log-book, The names dropped out of the prayers ;_ In many a household a vacant place; In many a life a vanished grace. We know our cast in the long life race, But only God knows theirs. From the Tinsley's Magazine.
